The composite image consists of three main parts. At the top is a world map color-coded by Cold War alliances. A legend to the left of the map identifies the colors: dark blue for NATO, light blue for other allies of the United States, red for the Warsaw Pact, dark red for socialist countries aligned with the Soviet Union, light red for other allies of the Soviet Union, white for non-aligned nations, and a red dot for Communist guerrillas. Below the map are two photographs. The one on the left shows a man in a suit and a woman in a teal dress smiling together, with the man holding a vintage television set. The one on the right shows a large group of young people sitting on top of a colorful, decorated bus, representing the hippie culture of the 1960s.
